As Dr Tyepin once said, when asked how on earth I had made it to the 1000th after my "close encounter" with a number of bottles of Tequilla the day before: "He has amazing powers of recovery!", BUT they weren't needed: Despite the freely running, all you can drink, bar at Popeye's 70th it wasn't that sort of party! The venue, people, chat and Band were superb, so got home "relatively" healthy!! "Super Mario's" (or whatever the landlord's name really is) panic at my announcement of a "Firework Display" outside, was dispelled when I showed him the two packets of sparklers! The 12 lucky "recipients" were encouraged to "write" happy "Birthday Popeye" in "sparkles" the carpark!

The Bongo had been "sort of" prepared the day before, but still needed final "fettling" and hurried loading of the infamous "CAMRA Whisky Tasting Kit", returning after a 5 year "Furlough".

The weather was disgusting; floods and downpours One flood VERY nearly led to the demise of the Bongo, but it got back onto four and we struggled to the last Simple pickup, and thence seemed back to Normal.

By the time we reached Alresford all was peace and light, all ready for the traditional (For SH3 at least) brightening of the weather for 11:00!

Turn Up Tony stood on a table to address the multitude, but we still couldn't see him, and he blathered on as is required about stuff that nobody listened to and off we blundered.

Another Lionel "Sage Advice" was: "When you have a heap of jobs and don't know how they are all going to get done: pick the worst and get on with it!"

Well this isn't even the worst, but let's knock it off!

Mind you "Andrew's Law" (Andrew is my secondary school buddy, saturation diver and inspection supervisor) : "When you have a problem to solve; decide which is the WORST THING you would have to do... and do it FIRST!" (that is before trying all the others)

Sort of similar, but subtly different. BUT, are they trumped by Pirsig's MOQ and the "application" of Quality to a task?

Pirsig, I seem to remember from Zen and the Art... advises: "don't attempt a task if you can't apply adequate Quality; take a break, have a coffee, or many. You'll know when you are ready"

Well I hardly ever drink coffee, but a tea seems to have worked, so let's try again...

Nah can't be arsed...

It was Birthing Blanket who realised that half the pack were in the wrong car park, but Bonn Bugle who fetched them to the right one. Popeye's excuse was that "Tarn" was some modern novelty for the better known "Bottom"; but I for one had noticed the name change on the Puttenham trail 2 or 3 weeks ago. Popeye was toasted in Cava for his 70th birthday, making him one of our younger hashers.

Bonn Bugle as hare announced a 7 Km trail; by the time we were back she corrected this to 8, but then added that this included the short cuts, making her estimate meaningless. We ran it in less than an hour; someone (Kelinchi?) put it at 4 miles, just about credible. Although 35 years ago I did believe – directions "Click for street map", which had made quite clear where we were to start.

You will have noticed that war crimes are only ever committed by the losing armies. The Romans summed this up succinctly: Vae victis!. (This is pronounced, almost, as Why weak teas?). This means "So much the worse for the losers"; and you can see why so few crimes have been investigated since 1945, because since then the losers have tended to be American. My Lai was very embarrassing for them. The International Criminal Court exists only on condition that the US, and all Americans, are exempt. Rwanda's Hutu war criminals have been tried and sentenced, but the Tutsi made very sure no one followed up on their own reprisals. Repentance is extremely rare; the Germans probably mistakenly – that we could cover 8 Km, 5 miles, in an hour, this is certainly unthinkable nowadays.

The most obvious feature of today's trail was the dominance of female runners. Ms Bean was well ahead of us out of sight, while those I did see were Possum, Doggy Style, Kelinchi, Speedy Humper: well, you get the idea. How much did this resemble the trail set from the Top car park 3 weeks ago? Well, we did today take in that same car park, but we got there from the south by a different route from the south-bound path then chosen by Fleur d:Or and Birthing Blanket. Naturally the fishing lake (or Tarn!)

was common to both trails; today's did include there a "string on a balloon" feature, with start and finish using the same path.

The early checks were numerous and close together – and not too obliterated by the rain, which of course had stopped by 11 am, our usual hash immunity from downpours. Thereafter the checks were much further apart, in places inevitably so, since there were no adjoining paths as possibilities to go wrong; and on the few occasions when such an opportunity offered, we found "Short Cut" written. The trail did take in the Middle car park, where so many had believed the start to be, so they could at least claim flour to justify their error. Plainly however they had not followed the useful suggestion in the run stand out on this, admitting guilt (this took decades). The Japanese behaved almost as badly as the Germans – in China, Korea, with our own British war prisoners – but are unable to say as much in public. Try breast-beating here, and you will be denounced as "woke", an extraordinary and recent insult, which seems to mean breaking the code of omertà. All right, we grew rich on the slave trade, and by stripping India of its wealth, but don't talk about it."You can't rewrite history" – as if!

SH3 and THE TETRAPODS

BUGLE MAJOR indeed showed her 2nd at HQ was no fluke when she came 2nd /9 at Lingfield
GO GILL GO spotted down to run in a 2 mile hurdle at Cork this Sunday _hope conditions there are better than in UK. LE GRAND FROMAGE has not run for some time rather like his human counterpart He went to Doncaster to compete in 2m hcup but he might as well have stayed at home as he was (8/10 Apparently 3 yr old BIG CHEESE ran recently at Nottingham to come 7/9

Two names from the past:-RAMBO T & RA(P)PER
The first finishing 3rd in a 17 f maiden hurdle at Ascot and the 2nd in an Ascot 3 miler down the field in 9th/13
MICK S SPIRIT went to Chelmsford on Thursday for a 5f sprint and came 5/10 On Saturday
QUEEN FLEUR aka FLEUR IRLANDAISE HAZEL (IRE)

etc went to Newmarket to participate in a mile handicap and came 8/10 with ROSE P at least 8 lengths ahead in 6th .

The MOUSE KING participated in the 'Christmas Parties at Newmarket 'dash and came 7th a couple of lengths behind LORD RAPSCALLION TO

MISTER RUMBALICIOUS was supposed to have better luck at Ffos Las than he did at Ludlow -we shall see SIR RUMI was a non runner but where I forget
LADY AMANDA went forth in a sprint at Chelmsford and came fourth

What about WALLY ? Well what about WALLY Think yourselves lucky that he prefers to spend time racing in France at Longchamp & Chantilly to which means he can't be over here lambasting the hash and race course administrators He did not cover himself in glory in his last run so perhaps he is resting on his laurels after a great summer Well time again to put a cap on it

BLESS EM ALL, BLESS EM ALL, THE YOUNG, N THE SHORT N THE TALL.

It was the night before bonfire night; YouGov suggested that if ever we needed Guy Fawkes it was now.

Le Pro hauled himself from his Cv19 deathbed to randomly sprinkle some Lidl ground dried wheat in district Merrow. (Like District 9 in Paris but with £30,000 Range Rovers added).

He rested, and then came out (not sexually), to meet random strangers in the Merrow allotment holder's car park. Local bonfire nighters were seen wandering and wondering why they'd been asked "are you on the hash".

Parking was an amusing challenge – the silent killer EVs slunk around...., eventually double parking other hashers. Then as their electrically operated boots came down they nearly missed decapitating other casual runn-ers.

Nine bold souls, were paraded in front of the hare:-

- Squid
- 3s4d
- Legolas
- Speedy Humper
- As above other half
- Simple
- Petal
- Bods
- Atalanta
- J Arthur

And for the record... The Lazy gits who rolled up for the meal were:-

- MB – lord knows why
- Lady C – at the fireworks
- Eagle Eye – at the fireworks
- Teq – In the pub
- Chundy – In the pub.

"It always goes this way" said the pack and set off the way it always goes. Up towards Newlands Corner.... Except it suddenly it swerved to starboard. We traversed the 2nd 8th and 17th holes of a golf course, then went to starboard again. Then the huge blobs of carbohydrate morphed into the merest sprinkle for a while.

FRBs varied from Atalanta (Atalanta was a human huntress whose name derives from the Greek 'atalantos' which means 'equal in weight.' She swore an oath of virginity to Artemis to prove her devotion, and these two themes, virginity and hunting, dominate most myths about her.- Wikipedia), at the start, through squid – desperate not to be seen running by her school mates with old people (again). To Lord knows whom at the end, as your author became an SCB with squid, Petal and Simples when the resto came into view.

Recollection is a well-marked trail with standard marks and a few back cheques.

Perhaps a tad long – as the actress...- when your author baled out 7 km were already on the clock.

Ashuka proved to be an excellent venue for food after a SFFHHH. Attentive staff, great food, good prices.

Atalanta (unaccustomed as I am to speaking to the hash), trumped up a few charges...

Eagle eye for loosing his Vindaloo virginity.

Squid for starting another Jacobite revolution – (Jacobitism was a political movement that supported the restoration of the senior line of the House of Stuart to the British throne. The name derives from the first name of James II and VII, which in Latin translates as Jacobus [Wikipedia? - Teq]).

Simple – new shoes

Chundy – for doing sweet FA

Teq for chatting up a hot blonde then realising it was Chundy.

All in all another Grand SFFHHH!

Hope you'll all be with us next month; wee jock le pro

Teq– An excellent report, as usual, from 3s4d, BUT he can't do it ALL the time! Let's have a few volunteers?
