It was my OWN fault! I didn't read ALL of the directions... jumped to the end, misinterpreted "left" / and "right" and saw more of Croydon than a Luftwaffe pilot, and indeed wanted, BUT spent a pleasant time with Mrs G reminiscing her courting days ... pure gold.

So apropos of nothing ... I searched and found a few scraps of memory lane instead of making some stuff up, SO random "Happy Looking" stuff.:

Shirley Hills Road is doubtless too remote from many of our hashers to attract them (I can see why: the 23 mile trip back took me 80 minutes). Bizarrely, those Surrey stalwarts who did make it there considerably outnumbered those from OCH3, who were effectively the three hares and two others. We did better than that; this report will include all those from Surrey, beginning with our 2 Joint Masters and their partners, plus our Trailmaster. The rest of Old Coulsdon were all with the Barnes Hash on a jolly in Weymouth, a resort I know too well: my time in the Training Squadron, then Ocean and Theseus, was spent largely off Portland Bill (on 5 shillings a day).

The lead hare – I was going to write “General Woundwort”, but they were rabbits – briefed Surrey on OCH3 customs. They do use false trails, though I saw none today; three blobs is On. What he did not say was that solutions are often 600 or 700 metres from the checks; but our people – Randy Pandy, Stevie Blunder, Loopy Lou, Miss Bean – rose to this challenge admirably.

Towards the end of the trail it was clear they are also into back checks, which became frequent; at least one had to be given away by the hares.. We were told 5.5 miles; it took us some 95 minutes (they have no enthusiasm for our prompt starts)

The area is of course built up, which meant we were on road at times, but to be fair these encounters with tarmac made up only a minor fraction of the run, and the scenery in the various parks and green spaces we visited was excellent., Hills certainly, but not too steep or long, and plenty of good autumn colour, all rather attractive, and clear pleasant weather.

I am not sure what became of Captain Webb; after a short cut he was running in the lead, but then we lost him, doubtless at one of those long checks. Silent Knight was not his usual front-running self, and was found in the car park at the end. So he missed most of the ponds promised by the hare, who told us he always aimed for two, and today surpassed himself with four. I am sure a shrink could find symbolism and significance in this obsession, but these escape your scribe.

There is a TV programme recorded live of the fire which destroyed the spire and roof of Notre Dame. The extraordinary heroism of the fire fighters is the centre of this programme, but it also shows how the Mayor of Paris and the French President reacted to the emergency. First of all, both were there, on the spot; how long did it take for any British politician to get to the Grenfell Tower? Secondly, while fully aware of their responsibilities, both had the good sense to leave all the decisions to the professionals, to accept their position on the sidelines, their lack of expertise. Neither had the usual escort of security guards or sidekicks who generally accompany senior politicians. Again, the Mayor, Annie Hidalgo, is a Socialist;

Macron professes to be of the Centre, though most of us would put him well to the Right of Centre. But the two of them were co-operative and cordial, in the face of a possible catastrophe: the world would not have been the same if the towers had fallen. The spire was a minor loss, dating back only to 1835. Other earlier spires had come and gone, but the towers are irreplaceable.
