When I was the proud owner of a Ford Granada estate (known as a "Grandad" to some), it had a "Fault indication" panel in a block of 5 or 6 above the windscreen, you know; "Brake fault", "Coolant fault", and so on.

The "faults" were "detected" by various sensors, most of which could go wrong themselves! I once drove, quite happily, with a "Full House"; i.e. ALL the lights on, ALL the sensors "defunct"! It's sort of how I implement trails for SH3; a "Full House" of breaking ALL of FRB's "Rules of the Hash";

Wrong Location!

Wrong direction!

Hare not going round!

Flour "too far" from checks!

Too much sun!

Too much tarmac!

Not enough shade!

Too near/in towns/villages!

Not in Surrey!

Not easy enough for the FRCs to "race away" and shake off the "Lessor Mortals" etc. etc.

I've got an excellent opportunity for a "Full House" on the stocks right now!

Anyway; back, or rather actually TO, Hash Flash's effort; How would I know? Didn't do it!

BUT I am privy to details of both the "actual" trail AND a Hasher's "recording"; like a "BodyCam" acting as "evidence"?

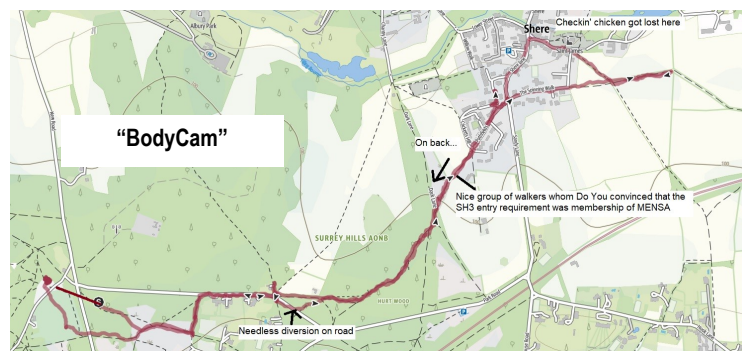

Seems to me; IF the Hare went round the "actual" trail, and he "probably" did ... why not? AND laid flour, and he "probably" did.. Why not? THEN; is it not the objective of the Harriers to "work together" in some way to find and follow the flour and at least try to get the whole pack round?

Just saying.

See "Body Cam" and "Hare Trail" below!

Quite fun isn't it ;
"mapping" between "open maps" and "OS maps"?

Or maybe not!
Good luck.

Ooooh a bit of it follows my "First Class Hike" route!!

 NO bottles turned up, well one did ... mine (that's a pint you owe me RHUM!)
 "Moustache? MOUSTACHE? WHAT Moustache?"

Oh Those mugs!

Wow seems to be working; only three mugs needed from the backup store this week!

A couple of Hashers requested labels for their own drinking vessels... what a good idea!

If the Hashers who requested a label, or indeed any others, email me details of what you would like e.g.

"Hash name"

aka

"Real name"

or something else, I'll try and get them printed on the wash proof vinyl labels.

Part 2

Hash Flash's "Flagship Albury Festival".... Great wasn't it!?

Since about Christmas Flash has been promoting and extolling the Albury "Free" Festival, so at last we hit it head on; and jolly fun it was.

I, of course, set about having fun, having skilfully avoided any of the preparations by turning up late... but I looked up some stuff:

The Albury Music Festival has grown from a small gathering of musicians and music lovers in a field to a full-on music festival that attracts some amazing musicians and raises money for local charities.

The bands and solo acts kindly waive their fee to play at Albury Music Festival so that more money is raised for charity, and a whole whoop of volunteers give up their time to ensure the day runs smoothly.

The main objectives remain the same...

To provide a safe and enjoyable day out for the local community

Receding Hare-Line 2022 - Runs start at 11:00 sharp!

- 2428 31 July Master Bates Horsell Common
- 2429 7 Aug Mother Brown TBC soon
- 2430 14 Aug Strumpet and Horny Farley Heath
- 2431 21 Aug Do You? & Velcro Crowhurst, Oxted
- 2432 28 Aug Twinkle & Capt. Webb

Email belcher@surreyh3.org to volunteer for trails

To raise money for our chosen charities and local good causes

To invite along talented local musicians, and to ensure they have fun too

To encourage the audience - to clap, cheer, sing and dance!

This, the 12th year, The Music Festival remains a FREE festival for the community. Money is raised from the Bar, BBQ, Raffle and donations. Donations are shared between the Guildford-based charity, Halow, and other local charities. The festival is sponsored by Silent Pool Gin.

CL predicted, correctly, a left hander, and then chose a right hander for himself. Off flour, obviously. The GM assured us of trail 90% in shade, 3.9 miles (or 5 for FRBs), and cows in fields. In reality the FRBs saw no cows except in the distance, and felt that 90% was in the sun, though this was only a feeling – probably 40 to 45% in shade? As for the distance, the second group of front runners (RHUM, DTT, 'IsKnees, Chastity Belt, myself) took 95 minutes, so yes, probably 5 miles. I have no idea how much less the first group took to run the trail (Atalanta, Blunder and Bean, Loopy Lou and Randy Pandy, Legolas). Well, as you can see, we still have fast runners. (Popeye did his own thing, surprise, surprise). We were also promised solutions

70 to 90 yards from the checks; at least twice that in reality. So much so that a fair few runners could not find the solutions at all, and on arrival went round asking "Did you actually find flour?"

The villages of Shere and Albury attract numerous visitors. Rural charm, Surrey at its best. Yes, but our runners have all visited both, and greatly prefer to stay in the countryside proper, not run on tarmac for half the trail. Doug was especially scathing; I can only imagine what Uncle Gerry was muttering. Now, if we had gone south instead, there would have been much more shade, and virtually no blacktop. A missed opportunity. You may protest that other hares have worked this to death: recently we have run trails by J. Athur and RHUM. Well, yes, but scenery revisited is greatly to be preferred to village streets.

Parking was easier than we had feared, despite the music festival scheduled for 2 pm. In fact a good number of non-hashers were there for other reasons, and left long before the music started. Well, started for real: there were strains of practising throughout the morning. It was a very good idea the GM had to combine a trail with such an event, and indeed to fit it in before the dreaded heat wave hit this country. You will remember 2003, I expect, when temperatures in France reached 45 degrees, and 15,000 people died of hyperthermia: we here have never before known, or even contemplated, as much as 40. Well, today at least was a pleasant 30.

With any luck we have seen the last of our Bullingdon Club Prime Ministers, whether "girly swot" Cameron, or the unspeakable author of that insult. His less than loyal followers have to explain their accepting for 3 years the identical misbehaviour which at last caused them to make him walk the plank. They have all chosen to praise his achievements, and above all that "He got Brexit done". Well, did he? The Northern Ireland protocol has yet to be resolved, with our ministers deciding that breaking international law is worthwhile, to keep the DUP on board.

Even supposing Brexit complete, how are we better off? Oh, emotionally, yes indeed "I've got my country back". But otherwise? Shortages in the shops, traders at their wit's end with paperwork, queues at passport control. Economically, we no longer form part of a major trading bloc, politically we have no allies. Culturally we are a European nation (though western Europe shares our wish to import American culture). We are all now worse off: where's that £350M per week someone (guess who!) promised us? Which would go to the NHS?
